1 - a new arrival

It was a normal day, sunny, blue sky, crisp ocean air. . . .A teen named Sora yawned and gazed up to the clouds. Riku . . . he mumbled. When are ya going to start that fire? I want some smores Another older boy named Riku groaned and said In a minute . . . But it s getting pretty dark. It s kinda hard to see . . . He picked up a long stick and heaved it at Sora. There was a loud WHACK, and then a yelp. Sora spat out sand and glared at his friend. Soft footsteps crunched behind Riku and a teen girl slid into the sand next to him. Hi guys! She said in a cheery voice. Hi Kairi. The boys said. Sora rubbed his bruised head and said to Riku It s not that dark, just sunset. Riku made a phmph sound and groaned.

Kairi looked at the clouds and gasped. Sora and Riku followed her gaze to a patch of cloud, which seemed to be puffing around and dispersing. Riku cried What s going on up there?! Some birds fighting No. . . . A plane crash? Nope. . A A Sora jumped up and shouted out A girl s falling off the cloud deck! We gotta help! A figure escaped the clouds and fell fast to the ocean surface. Blond hair wildly whipped about as she plunged into the sea.

Sora got up and raced towards the water. As his toes touched the frothy shore, he looked back to see Riku relaxing casually. Hey! Aren t you gonna help me save her? Sora called to Riku in a concerned tone. Riku laughed and shook his head. Kairi frowned and shoved Riku hard. He yelped in pain and rubbed his aching shoulder. Sora grunted and swam into the sea. He saw ripples where the girl had fallen, but no sign of her. He looked around, and floated up and down. Sora looked for shore, which was a long ways away. Sora took in a large gulp of air and dove under the surface.

Opening his eyes, he saw the ocean floor, full of life. An angel fish swam away in fright as Sora swam down farther. Bubble floated upwards, and Sora caught sight of the girl. Her shoe was caught in a piece of coral, and she flailed violently. But when she saw Sora, she calmed down a little bit, and reached out for him. He unhooked her foot and took hold of her waist. They swam up together, but then Sora noticed that the girl stopped breathing. He swam harder, and broke through the salty water. The girl mumbled and fluttered her lashes, and fell back to unconsciousness. Sora gripped her tightly, and used all his strength to pull her onto the beach.

Riku and Kairi ran over to Sora, who had laid the girl on her back. Riku cried out Is she alright?! What happened? Sora breathed deeply and replied I don t know. She s stopped breathing; hurry out of the way. He pushed Riku aside, and plugged the girl s nose. Sora made a gross face and linked his lips to hers. He was breathing out hard, and it wasn t long until the girl was breathing with him. She turned over quickly and spat out water. Color returned to her face and she looked up at Sora and his friends with gratitude. Riku and Sora smiled broadly, for she was beautiful.

The girl shook her mop of blonde hair around and threw it back. Her blue eyes sparkled as Sora drooled and Riku awed and oohed. The girl laughed slightly and put out her hand. I m Alixah! She said cheerily. Kairi gave her a weird look, but then smiled and shook Alixah s hand and introduced herself. The boys said their names slowly and quietly as Riku looked her up and down and Sora gazed into her eyes. Alixah looked at Sora quietly and finally said ``You saved me, didn t you? I saw you . . . under. . Under the water when my foot . . . Was stuck, yeah that s it! Sora blushed and said Yeah . . . Don t mention it Alixah gasped, Don t mention it!? I couldn t say enough to thank you! She threw her arms around Sora and laughed. Riku grumbled and turned around with his arms crossed angrily. Sora blushed and scratched his head modestly. Kairi coughed and spoke to Alixah quietly So um What happened in the clouds?

2 - Here to Stay

Ummm. . . . Actually I don t know. . . Alixah scratched her head and sighed. Kairi cocked her head and then went over to check the fire. Sora and Riku stayed though. Riku asked Why were you up there anyways? Alixah once again sighed and shrugged. She looked around carefully and her eyes sparkled. Beautiful palm trees spurted from the sand and little flowers popped from every corner. Alixah walked to the small waterfall and gazed into the water. Sora and Riku looked at each other confused yet curious.

Kairi called out The fire s finally started! YES!!! She grabbed a stick and stuck a wedge of pineapple on the tip. While holding the stick over the fire with her feet, she wove a beautiful necklace with her hands. Her nimble fingers darted through the strands of cloth weaving an interesting pattern. Sora and Riku sat close to the fire and began to talk, and soon Alixah sat beside them. While the three friends talked, Alixah looked at her new surroundings. Every now and then, Sora and Riku looked at Alixah out of the corners of their eyes. When Kairi caught their stares, they turned away and blushed.

Riku cleared his throat and mumbled quietly So. . . Are you gonna stay with us Alixah? Cause you can you know. . . Hang out with me sometime. . . Like. . . On the other side of the island? And. . . erm. . . watch me fight. . . people. . . cough Yeah. . . Alixah raised her eyebrows and tried not to laugh but instead got a demented cough noise. Okay. That sounds. . . interesting. But I wanna spend time with all of you guys! It'll be fun, but I don't wanna be a problem. Everyone shook their heads and assured Alixah that she wouldn't be an issue (especially the boys).

Alixah smiled broadly and chomped down on an oozy smore. Sora yawned and said "I'm going to bed, see ya tomorrow guys." He got up and walked away quietly. Riku and Alixah yawned soon afterward. Kairi laughed and said "Alixah, I'm going to take you to your room. Riku, get some rest. You don't want to be tired for your special date tomorrow." She winked and giggled as Riku glowed a bright scarlet. Alixah turned a little pink, but not too much for Riku to notice. Kairi took Alixah up a ladder, unfortunately barely noticeable in the dark. Alixah groped for the wooden boards, and finally reached to top. Kairi led her to a room with a cloth draped over the entrance. Inside there were three lights, a blanket, and one bed. Kairi blushed and said meekly "Well it isn't much, but I bet we can fix it up while you're here. Sorry." Alixah gazed with wonder at the empty room and said cheerily "No worries, you and me can fix it in no time! It'll be fun!"

Kairi said goodnight and left, while Alixah sat on her bed thinking. What can I do? When should I tell them About the real story. . . . ? Oh boy oh boy this is gonna be hard with a capital H. Well since they don't know yet, I'll have to use my creepy powers in private. Alixah groaned and pointed to the floor, which magically turned from wood to lush carpet. Creepy powers or not, I'm gonna be myself and hope for the best. . . Goodnight!

3 - Secret Revealed

The morning sun shone through the holes in the blanket and Alixah rose with a start. Aaaannhhh. . . She groaned. Her feet hit the carpet with a swishy noise and Alixah pointed to the wall. A mirror immediately sprung from the ground, and then a dresser emerged next to Alixah's bed. Her powers were used here and there, creating tables, chairs, pencils, pens, paper, clothes, and plants. For Alixah was the most powerful girl in the world. She was the princess of everything. She could do anything, literally. Fly, breathe underwater, make things appear out of nowhere, disappear, shape-shift, anything! She doesn't even have to point. Just thinking of it, and it'll happen. Yet she must keep it a secret, or the wrong people will find out. Alixah's hair twisted and formed a braid and her clothes changed from jeans and a t-shirt to a pair of shorts and cut-off tank. Sora knocked on the wall and pulled back the rag in place of a door. He smiled brightly and said "Hey Alixah! Riku and I are going to get some things for the raft, then later on we're gonna go tree jumping and hang out on the roof. Do you wanna come?" Hopping on one foot and pulling on her last shoe, Alixah managed to blurt out "YAH!" before crashing onto the bed and flipping backwards. Sora laughed and pulled her up and out of the room. While running to the other side of the island Alixah asked Sora "What raft are you talking about?" Sora breathed heavily as he jumped on the wooden overhang. "Oh! Um. . . Me. . . Kairi and Riku. . . Wanna see new worlds! So we're setting off on a raft." Alixah nodded and jumped over a rock. When the two teens finally reached Riku with the half-ready raft, Riku threw a log at Sora and laughed and talked to Alixah as if nothing happened. "So, Alixah. . . Um. . . What are you doing tonight? I mean. . . Do you wanna hang out? With me. . . ?" Alixah blushed and agreed to go with Riku. Sora growled and hit Riku with the log. Riku yelped, of course, and ran after Sora, leaving Alixah dumbfounded. She just shrugged and went to the sandy shore. Waves swept gently over Alixah's feet and left frothy outlines on the beach. Alixah sighed and held out her hand. A ribbon of water slithered up and into her hand. It bounced and shaped into different objects. Alixah sat and watched the water morph into birds, cubes, and fish. She thought of the people on the island, and blushed when Riku and Sora came to mind. She felt her cheeks get hot, then chuckled embarrassed. "Show me who I really like. . ." The water quickly morphed into the shape of Sora and then fell with a splash. "What in the world. . ." Alixah spun around to see Kairi with her mouth open. "Did you. . . How did you. . . Explain!" Kairi sat next to the blushing girl, who was stuttering uncontrollably. "Don't worry, I won't tell anybody!" Kairi said with a laugh, "Just tell me how you did that!!!" Alixah smiled and began her story. "When I was little, about six years old, I was kind of special. My parents never told me this but, I had amazing powers. I can do anything! Fly, morph into stuff, and all that junk. And so I was walking home one day after school, skipping and all, I pushed open the front door, chucked my bag somewhere and walked down the hall. I stopped to hear my parents talking to somebody. But then I just heard my mom scream and a thump. Alixah stopped and wiped a tear from her eye. "Sorry. Um.. Yeah, so my mom was murdered, and then I heard my dad. Stop it, you fiend! Get out of our home, stay away from my daughter! Back off you- And then another thump. I saw my dad fall, but I could only see his hand. It was kinda gross and bloody." Kairi cried a little, and asked for Alixah to continue. "So when I was six I was extremely good at hiding. So I ran and hid in a very small cabinet. I cried for so long, listening to the murderers footsteps passing by the cabinet and him saying Come out little princess. . . WOAH there, waddaya mean, princess ? Kairi questioned. Alixah flicked the sand and said I am the eighth princess of heart. One of the keys to the Door To Darkness, and Kingdom Hearts . Kairi gasped and then hugged the poor princess. Kairi then asked What about the clouds yesterday? Alixah laughed and said I can cross into other worlds, so I went into the spiritual realm and was talking to my parents. I said goodbye and walked away, and the clouds weren t as solid as I thought. They both laughed and watched as the sun began to set. Kairi got up, walked to the separate island and called over to her friend, Don t wanna miss your date, huh? We re all going to watch sunset, then you ll hang out with your boyfriend. Hah! Alixah said Did you hear what I said to the water? And what it showed? Kairi nodded and laughed. You guys are cute together. Alixah blushed and ran after Kairi, for the sun was setting fast.
