

A Poem of Pyramus and Thisbe

By JocPointytoespony620

Submitted: July 28, 2006

Updated: July 28, 2006

I did this because I was making a pic on Photoshop and I wanted to try the effect of fading words, so I wrote this poem. I love Greek mythology, so I used one of the most known tales of two lovers and the white mulberry tree, and changed it into a "a"

Provided by Fanart Central.

<http://www.fanart-central.net/stories/user/JocPointytoespony620/37627/A-Poem-of-Pyramus-and-Thisbe>

Chapter 1 - A Poem of Pyramus and Thisbe

2

1 - A Poem of Pyramus and Thisbe

Pyramus and Thisbe

(note: This is better understood if you have studied the original story of these two lovers. You can look it up at wikipedia.com to read the whole thing and then you'll understand this. :) And I'm not calling anyone stupid, just giving a pointer to people who don't know the story.)

In the crack in the wall,

Pyramus' sweet maiden's voice,

Tickles his heart gayly,

Thisbe hear's her lover's sigh,

And sorrow clouds them.

In the night,

Sweet maiden runs,

Swift to the white mulberry tree,

To await her love's arms,

Shall the beast find her?

Pyramus in the night,

Seeks blood on his lover's shawl,

And the blade of his own into him.

Thisbe sees her love,

Wills the stars to brave her,

And the mulberry tree drank red,

Of the lovers and their sorrow.

-CW (me!)