This is about a girl demon who is learning things from a young man. She is part cat and part wolf. It's pretty funny cause she doesn't know any more than a wild animal. Their relationship progresses through the story. This is my first fic.

Chapter 4 - Encounters

she was going to attack. I heard sniffs inches away from my face and felt her bodypress against my blanket so I quickly wrapped it around her and tied it on with a smaller strip of cloth. She struggled at first but began to realize I wasn't trying to hurt her. "There." I opened my eyes and made sure it was right. She began to sniff the material. She seemed to like it. Now that she was up close I could see how beautiful she was. She smiled at me and I saw her fangs. They were a little big... She could have ripped me to shreds! I didn't think about what I would do next.

"Now... What to do with you..." She began to rub on me and purr with delight. "I guess your coming with me then." I walked ahead a little and told her to come. She figured it out in a little while. She walked on her toes so silently that if I didn't turn back every now and then I wouldn't have known she was there! I saw a light up ahead after a good while. I prayed it was the next village. I started to run and forgot about the girl. I ran into the village and a shadow leaped above me. "AAAAAAAAAAHHHHHH!!! A DEMON! RUN!!!" All of the villagers packed up everything and left in three seconds flat. I saw the girl there standing in front of me cleaning her face like a cat. "Oops... I forgot about you..." I looked around in the deserted village thinking to myself how to prevent this from happening in the next village. I found some food that had been left behind and started to prepare it for us to eat.

While my back was turned I heard some chickens clucking like mad and I saw her chasing some. "NO! We do not chase chickens!" She sensed my anger and stopped where she was. "N-nnnnooooo." "Did you just speak?!" "Nnnoo." "That's right no chasing." "Ch-ch. No ch-chaaaa-assssiiiiing" "Good! Very good!" Just then an idea popped into my head. If I teach her to speak I could be a legend! The man who teaches demons to speak. Hmmm. I like the sound of that..."

So we stayed in the village as I taught her everything. It took her a while to grasp the whole "you, me" thing but she learned very fast. At one point the food ran out but she would go out and bring me something as needed from the forest. I also got her some better clothes. A lovely blue dress that fit her just perfectly. I grew quite attached to her and almost began to think of her as quite harmless.

One night, though, as I was sleeping, a great bear demoncrashed the hut I was in and began to attack! The first swing of it's giant claws missed and hit the floor. But the second swipe hit my arm. Just as he was about to finish me the girl leaped in and stood in the way and began to growl and bare her fangs. She started to move him away from me. A swipe, a miss. As she was jumping in the air the demon got a hold of her tail, which I have learned through experience is a BIG pee peeve of hers... A hiss and a low howl erupted from her throat as she took out both of his eyes. The demon ran away in a blind rage into the forest.

Meanwhile, I tried to check out my arm and observe the damage. It was pretty bad. I wouldn't be able to use that arm for quite a while. After seeing that the demon was well out of sight, the girl came over to me and smiled. All of the ferocity of that horrible monster that attacked the bear demon melted away. My arm throbbed in pain and I whimpered a little. "Sei hurt." "Yes... Ahh... Sei hurt." She scooted up closer to me as I backed away. She grabbed my arm and started to bring it up to her mouth and I immediately jerked it back. "How get better if not lick?" "With some water and a bandage..."

I had been planning on leaving the village soon but we would need to stay until I felt good enough to move around. I continued to teach the girl new things and the more I taught her, the more she seemed human. I kept telling myself I could let her go if I wanted to... But she looked at me and I felt her innocence. I had promised myself I would slay any demons I came accross, yet, I can't help becoming a little attached...

SOOOOOOOOOOOO? What did you think? Please tell me how it was... I'm not too good at this. I'm going to put up pics of my characters soon so you know how they look, starting with the girl. And if your wondering, she does get a name in the second chapter.
