1 - The Seal: Chapter 1

Hey this is my first fan fiction so don't be too disappointed or anything like that I am trying!

Zelda stared out her window and sighed heavily, it looked like it was going to be a good day earlier but now it looked dreary.

The storm clouds were moving quickly and Zelda simply shut her window and turned around. Her room was well lit with candles. But it still felt chilly.

There was a loud knock on her door and Zelda walked to answer it, standing there was Impa. Impa looked at the Zelda's face and could see how bored she was.

"Cheer up princess, its dinnertime and they have a good meal fixed up" Impa said cheerfully trying to lift the mood. Zelda stretched her arms above her head and yawned, quite loudly. Slowly moving her arms to her sides Zelda looked at her caretaker.

"Impa tell father I'm a bit tired and I won't be there for dinner" she said dully. After hearing this, the sheikah frowned. "Zelda it's been raining all day and you've kept yourself in here the whole day and I expect you to come out for dinner" Impa said sternly. "Fine" Zelda replied walking down the stairs and into the dining hall.

There was an extremely long table placed in the center of the room. The king of Hyrule sat at one end chomping rather loudly on his food. Zelda wrinkled her nose in disgust I always thought kings would know manners when it comes to eating she thought. After she sat beside her father he swallowed the rest of his food.

He cleared his throat and took a deep breath. "Zelda as you know you are now sixteen and it's time you found yourself a husband" he said. Zelda's look of weariness was replaced with that of shock. "Y-You can't be serious" she stuttered. He nodded "I am serious, we start looking tomorrow" he stated gleefully. Zelda's face was white as a sheet "Why tomorrow?" she asked. "Because we have to do it as soon as possible as you know we need a little more money and I have already raised that taxes three times in the last month" he said wiping his mouth with a napkin.

Zelda's face began turning red, "So that's what this is all about" she stood angrily pushing her untouched food away. "Some deal to marry me off for money!" as she yelled this her hands clenched into fists at her sides.

"Zelda I have no idea what you're talking about!" The king exclaimed "This is for the best!" he looked at Zelda to see her reaction.

She looked at him angrily "Well for your information! The only one I ever loved and the only one I will ever love is gone!" she snarled as she stormed out of the room.

The king sat there watching her leave in disbelief. What did she mean? Who did she love? The king had no idea what any of it meant.

Zelda was now in her room and nothing was stopping the tears from flowing. She missed Link, more than anything in the world. She loved him, but she never told him....and now it hurt.

Well that's the end of Chapter 1 good? bad? Comment!

2 - The Seal: Chapter 2

okiee dokiee I am going to write more! Right now!

Link sat in his room at the Stock Pot Inn; he was tired and was taking a well deserved break. 5 years ago he had defeated Gannondorf and 5 years ago he had saved Terminia from being crushed by the moon.

He had decided to live in Terminia after he had returned Majora's mask back to the Happy Mask salesman. Everyday when he went back to his room in the Stock Pot Inn he would reflect on everything, his old home Hyrule, his friends, his family.

Sighing heavily he tossed off his hat and collapsed on his bed. Tatl his fairy companion during his quest for Majora's mask and her brother Tael were his only comforts whenever he thought about Hyrule.

They weren't his only friends; he had Anju and Kafei, Romani the list was endless. But around this time of day everyone was busy. Link pulled something out from under his pillow; it was the ocarina of time. He looked at it closely remembering the person who gave it to him....Princess Zelda.

Link closed his eyes angrily as he tried to push out memories of his friends at Hyrule. Terminia was his new home and he wanted to live there guiltless. But that wouldn't happen. He felt guilty, for leaving them all. But...what was done was done and there was no way he could change that.

He shoved the ocarina under his pillow. Tatl flew out from a crack in the wall she was yawning, but it was hard to tell because she was so small. She looked at Link who was clutching his head and let out a yell of frustration.

Tatl was all too used to this behavior she flew up to him and landed on his shoulder.

"Thinkin' about Hyrule again?" she asked. "Yeah..." he replied quietly. "Come on Link! You've been tryin' way too long to forget about that place! It's where you're from! Don't throw out good memories!" she looked at him.

He turned his head to look at the small pixie. "But every time I think about it, it makes me more and more homesick! Tatl I don't want to go home!" he replied. Tatl sighed "I don't get it? Why don't you want to go home?" she asked. "Because no one remembers" he replied. She was confused "I thought you said" Link interrupted her sentence.

"Yeah the sages remember" he blew his bangs out of his face "But none of the people do, like when I walk into the market and bump into somebody they don't say 'oh my gosh I am so sorry, wait you're Link aren't you? I am actually meeting Link the hero of time' but no instead I get a 'hey watch where you're going' or a 'sorry sir that was careless of me'" he smirked. "And? So what you're being treated like a normal human being" Tatl exclaimed. "You don't get it do you? I saved their lives and I'm not even remembered!" he relied.

Tatl sighed again "I don't get the point of trying to consul you Link! All you do is argue with me until I'm in a bad mood" she snapped. In a huff she flew back into the crevice in the wall mumbling to herself about how ungrateful Link is.

yes I know the plot hasn't come out yet...but be paitient grasshopper for in the next chappy the plot will begin to unfold!

3 - The Seal: Chapter 3

More ficcy! More ficcy! On with the ficcy!

Saria sat there in the lost woods listening to the rain silently in deep thought. She had felt fear creeping out from the edge of her mind but she quickly moved it aside.

It was probably nothing and she didn't want to worry the other sages with something as little as a small fear. Suddenly a raindrop smacked her head as the rain broke through the trees shelter.

She quickly ran inside the forest temple to keep herself out of the cold rain. The temple seemed eerie instead of its normal peaceful look.

It was dark and Saria sighed, it was better than being cold and wet though. She clapped twice and the four torches in the center of the room sent up flames the color of their respective poe.

One was blue, another green, another purple, and the last one was a normal colored flame. But...something still didn't seem right. She wasn't exactly sure what it was though.

She heard a loud snapping sound coming from behind her. She spun around nothing was there that must have just been my imagination.....suddenly she heard a grunt from behind her.

Before she could turn again a spear was shoved through her stomach. She looked down at the spear and gasped. The grunt came again and the spear was pulled out.

She turned around slowly, she was breathing heavily. A moblin stood there looking proud of itself. "W-What?!" Saria was stunned. But when Link defeated Gannondorf I thought all of his minions went with him.....She thought. The moblin grinned showing off uneven and disgusting looking teeth.

Saria wheezed trying to breathe, her eyes fluttered between open and closed and she let out a scream, a blood curdling, horror shriek as she slumped to the ground....dead.

Meanwhile

Zelda shot up in a cold sweat, she had an awful nightmare filled with monsters, and Gannondorf, death and what was that last thing.....oh yes...Link

She stood up and walked out to her balcony, she felt a soft breeze tickling her face and blowing her hair aside. Finally....no more rain she thought. She looked out at everything she could see the town alive with people and further out she could see the beautiful Hyrule field.

She smiled, Hyrule was so beautiful. Suddenly the soft breeze swept past as more of a fly off the castle wind. Zelda walked back into her room. Three maids stood there and quickly began dressing her.

They put on the corset and pulled the strings tight. Zelda gasped “Owww” she moaned. They pulled on a light lavender dress with matching slippers. The end was embroidered with tiny sewn on white roses.

They pulled her hair into an elegant bun. Two bangs hung down on the sides of her face and they fastened on a necklace. It was a hollow diamond, but on the inside a small blue fire was glowing it was hooked on a silver chain. They lifted up my silver head piece on her head it had a single sapphire in the center.

The sapphire was surrounded by diamonds. I walked down the hall way and into the main hall where my father stood. I walked past him like he wasn't there. He looked at me and shook his head.

She strode outside and into the courtyard she was holding a book it was written in ancient hylia and she had been completely absorbed in it for the last few days. Suddenly a sound came from in a bush Zelda looked up from her book.

Suddenly a tiny blue light flew out from a bush. “Navi?!” Zelda exclaimed.

Sorry Saria fans didn't mean to, she just seemed the easiest for people to attack anyway THE PLOT UNFOLDS!!!!
