1 - Intro

Rene s Story

Hello everybody my name is Rene and I am here to tell you about what of my life Eskerna Sensei will let me tell you. First I think I ll tell you a little bit about myself. Nia Uchiha is my best friend and my favorite hobby rules my life. My favorite hobby is boys, good looking boys. I make love potions all the time to trick them.

I can t say exactly when guys started showing up at my house but I do know that I ve always been like this about guys. They only fall for me if I fall for them but if I fall for them they have to fall for me. That s how I got all of those Akatsuki on my side.

Anyway, my story takes place on a very exciting day for me. You see unlike most people, I am willing to take the time to find every missing piece of a dead person. I don t like the whole gray skin, undead looking dead person. When Deidara s decoy exploded I found every missing piece thinking that it was really him. The day when my story takes place is the day when I found out that he was really alive.

2 - Part 1: Neji

Part 1: Neji

That day I needed to find a new way to choose which guy to spend my day with. I was sitting in a tree near my house, Itachilicious was in the next tree next to mine, Deidara was standing under my tree, and Neji was standing in the clearing with his team, team Kakashi, and the sand siblings. Nia, Gonan, Eskerna Sensei, Ashika, Kaila, and Johan Sensei were all hiding somewhere. First I tried enie meanie miny mo.

“Oh Itachilicious, will you come home with me?” I asked in a playful tone. For some reason he ran away. I had to think of something else.

“Nia will you randomly pick a name out of this hat?” I asked.

“Sure I will Rene,” she said as she put her hand in the hat and pulled out a piece of paper.

“Who did you pick?”

“Itachilicious?”

“Alright, pick a number between one and ten.”

“Five.”

“That was Itachilicious’ number. Hey Itachilicious, wait for me!”

“Poor Itachi.”

I ran after Itachilicious as fast as I could. After we were both out of sight Nia explained how she had made it so I would choose Itachilicious no matter what. I soon found out and sent her a vision.

“That’s weird,” said Nia.

“What’s weird?” asked Gonan.

“I just had a weird thought that Deidara and Neji should play rock, paper, scissors best two out of three to spend the day with Rene.”

“Well, I’d hate to tempt fate,” you know who said that, really, come on.

“Then bring it on,” said Deidara.

Round one: Neji starts out with paper beating Deidara’s rock. Why doesn’t Deidara look too happy about that? Round two: Neji, thinking that Deidara would copy him, chose scissors but Deidara chose rock again. Oh, it seems that Neji is trying too hard. Round three: Neji chose paper again thinking that Deidara would choose rock again but Deidara saw through his ruse and chose scissors. Deidara actually seemed upset that he won.

“What’s wrong Deidara?” asked Nia, “You won, didn’t you?”

“Isn’t one of Rene’s catch phrases ‘sometimes the winner loses’?”

“She doesn’t use that one very much.”

“This would probably be the kind of situation in which she would use it.”

“You’re right she is annoying like that.”

I soon returned dragging Itachilicious behind me. I decided to use my special saying and I’ll tell you why. You might notice that in any game there is always a winner and a loser. The winner will usually look proud and accomplished and the loser will usually look sad and lowly. I just ask myself which one I would rather give a hug to. Now do you get what I am trying to say?

So I grabbed hold of Neji and led him to my house after promising a thousand times that I wouldn’t take him through the back gate. I brought him into the upstairs of my house, a place where I go when I need to feel innocent. It was a garden of live plants which is almost nonexistent in my village. The grass that grows out of the wood floor is so soft that you could fall asleep on it. That is the place where Neji suddenly became inquisitive about my village.

"So what do you think?" I asked.

"I thought your village was supposed to be scary, this is beautiful," he joked.

"It is scary at night when the windows are open. Are you trying to say you want to see something scary?"

"Well, I heard that you can't even imagine how scary it is here."

"I thought you didn't want to go through my big iron gate."

"I would be much obliged if you would change the subject."

"The only way to get to the village of haunts is through my garden of zombies, Neji. But if you really feel that way then I know the perfect subject to change to."

I wrapped my arms around his waist and rested my head on his shoulder. Neji was sometimes nervous around me. I don't think anybody would believe me if I said that he gets really shy when I try to get him to kiss me. I didn't have to look up at him to tell that his face was beet red.

"You know, the sunset through one of these windows is the most beautiful thing I've ever seen," I said quietly.

"That all depends on uh...what you think beautiful is," he stuttered.

"It's beautiful like this room. Why does everybody assume that because I'm from the village of the haunts, I think creepy things are beautiful?"

"I'm sorry Rene."

"You don't have to apologize to me it was an honest mistake."

"Rene, could I please have some personal space?"

"C'mon, I won't bite, unless you want me to. I'm a witch, not a vampire. Now you're starting to upset me."

"I didn't mean it like that, I'm just not ready."

"Neji, how long have you been saying that you're not ready? How much longer do you need? How much longer do you think I can wait?"

"The truth is, I'm too proud to admit that I'm afraid to kiss you. I'm ready, but I'm not sure if I can."

"I've never faced this situation before, I don't know what to do."

Suddenly my age began to show and tears fell down my cheeks. That was truly the first time I felt clueless in a relationship. I shuddered and closed my eyes. Aren't boys supposed to be girls' fearless heroes who certainly aren't afraid of an innocent kiss. My mind was racing. I jumped when I felt someone's lips on my own. Neji? I opened my eyes and saw his own gazing hopefully into them. I was speechless. Neji had just conquered his only fear so that I would quit whining. Man, I'm such a jerk. If he really believes that you can't change who they are, then I'm doomed.

"Neji, I feel really bad about this. Is there anything I can do to make it up to you?" I asked hopefully.

"You already have. You didn't do anything to make me mad, I just decided to do it to make you feel better," he said taking me in his arms.

"Thank you Neji."

"What was it you were saying about the sunset?"

"Just watch, it's about to happen."

Neji was speechless when he saw the sunset through my windows. They created rainbow flowers on my ceiling that were almost more beautiful than the real thing. One of my best friends scratched out the designs with their claws. After seeing it so many times I was still amazed by them.

We fell asleep there, lying on the soft grass. I was really glad he had come because my day would have been completely different if I had spent it with Deidara or Sasori, and let's face it, Itachilicious would never pay mind to a fool like me.

3 - Part 2: Deidara

Part 2: Deidara

The next day Deidara showed up at my door with a beautiful bouquet of dead roses. I hugged him and gave him a kiss on the cheek. He brought me flowers almost every day.

Roses, what did I do? I asked.

What didn't you do, Rene? he answered with another question.

Deidara, you're so mysterious, I love that about you.

Is there anyone there besides you?

No, uh&Deidara, where is your arm? Did something happen when you invaded the sand village?

He seized my shoulder with his remaining hand and kissed me passionately on the lips. I put my hand on his cheek and kissed him back. Did I mention what a great kisser Deidara was? I could have stood there forever but he backed away.

Rene, I didn't want to tell you over the phone. I didn't want you to worry about me, Deidara whispered.

Can you tell me what happened? I asked.

The jinchuriki crushed my arm with his sand. You shouldn't worry, I'll learn to adapt to life with one arm.

What am I going to do with you? You promise that you won't get hurt and you come back successful but missing one arm.

Are you busy Rene?

Would you like to come in Deidara?

Can we play on your new Wii?

Yes!

Deidara and I played on my Wii for most of the day. Who knew he could play better missing an arm. We played the new Naruto game but Dei didn't like it so I showed him my new secret special Akatsuki video game. That was a big mistake.

Deidara invited over all of his buddies to check out this new game. Pretty soon the whole Akatsuki gang was in my living room playing on my Wii. At least Deidara and I got some alone time. Maybe next time he'll be able to keep his mouths shut so there won't be another late night Akatsuki Wii party.

4 - Part 3: Sasori

Part 3: Sasori

After the party they all wanted to stay and hang out but I kicked them all out individually. Deidara was the last one out, then I closed and locked the door. Finally, it was over. When I stumbled into the living room and crashed onto the couch I noticed Sasori sitting in the corner of the room.

Why are you still here? I asked.

I didn't want you to be alone, he said.

Are you sure you don't just want to play video games?

Of course not, unless you want me to. What happened to make you so mad?

It was supposed to be just me and Deidara. Then I showed him that game and he freaked out.

Would it make you feel better if I took you someplace on a date?

Wow, that would make me feel much better! How do you like horror movies?

That's a perfect idea.

Sasori and I decided to stay home and watch a really scary horror movie. That way I would get a chance to snuggle up real close when it got to the scary parts. As an added bonus, horror movies are my favorite.

I was the only person on my team who could endure scary movies. Nia would probably run out screaming after the first twenty minutes. Gonan would fall asleep because he doesn't get scared that easily. Eskerna Sensei would be calling Kakashi to come and save her while Nia was screaming.

After the movie we just talked until we got bored and fell asleep. I had a strange dream about a cute chibi version of Sasori. He was doing a puppet show for a baby version of Gonan's best friend Gaara. It was cute but it had no meaning so I woke up.

I was still lying on the couch but Sasori was standing in front of me talking on the phone. After he got off the phone I looked up at him. There was worry in his eyes.

Sasori, what's going on? I asked.

Something terrible has happened Rene, he sighed.

What is it? I sat up and grabbed his shaking hands.

He sat down on the couch and our eyes met.

Itachi, captured and tried to kill Nia. She was rescued by Kiba and they alerted Eskerna about the situation.

That doesn't affect us.

That's just it, it does affect us. Your sensei has forbidden you to see or speak with me or Deidara ever again.

I don't believe it.

I've been saying that to myself for the last half an hour but it's still true. Really we just don't want to believe it.

You're right. Eventually we'll have to find some way to get back together.

Yes but for now it looks like this is goodbye.

Until we meet again, Sasori of the red sand.

He kissed me longingly and disappeared out the front door. For the longest time I thought he or Deidara would come back and say April fools or something silly like that, but they never came. So sad. Why did it have to end like this.

That was the end of Rene s Story. Next I m going to do Nia Uchiha s story. It s going to be a lot longer and more exciting. Hope you liked the story.
