1 - Promise of Hope

Promise of Hope- By Alex.P

As rain pours down a
Vacant and bare boulevard,
Everyone feels dull and dejected,

A single girl&
Her smile&
So astounding and passionate&
But yet&

Each and everyone looks right though her transparent body
As they pass&
Rejecting the small girl
A little black girl&
So vulnerable&
So weak&
Locked in a white man's world
No one returns her smile&
Not a single hello &
Not even a glimpse&
A crushing pain penetrating her chest&

A hasty entrepreneur
Behind schedule by the torrent and traffic&
Knocks the girl into a sea of muck
Her eyes beginning to swell&

Someone pauses&
Stops right in their tracks&
Accepts the youngster&
Lifts her weightless body from the concrete floor&
She asks for his name&
He doesn't reply&
Just says it's not important
A gap tooth smile spreads across her dark features
The young man who took his limited time to help that girl&
Disappears into the pace of the city's heart.

As the little girl dusts herself off

She couldn't help but find some hope in her world.

The sun peaks out from the dark and foggy overcast
A rainbow materializes overhead as the rain trickles to a stop.
A rainbow of promise and hope.

A promise of freedom.
