1 - Untitled

Covered in vines, head to toe. I ain't got no place to go.

Doors closed off to me, not a big controversy.

This is where I force a grin, in a place called Simpleton.

Where the buildings go on forever, and we have no cares whatsoever.

Just life and death repeating, and the days are fleeting,

Welcome to Simpleton.

Where time withers life away; my bubble's popped and gone astray;

Fall down, my downfall; I guess I don't walk so tall.

Welcome to my home.

Where the stars hang in the skies, and the aesthetic eventually dies.

Tears fall full of sin and spite, to cry out all of love's insight.

"Second star to the right" is far away, and the towers are all that stay.

The daybreak separates day and night, separating dark and light.

Everyone's walking on the ledge, about to topple over the edge.

Welcome to Simpleton.
