It was that ever dreaded day of February Fourteenth, come again to put those without lover through one hell of a day.

Drake sat sighing in his office, thinking with much anxiety of all the past years, each spent with a different girlfriend. However, this year would be a first for the detective. He would not be begging before whichever pitying colleague who would listen to him to take his shift so he could run to buy a cheap box of chocolates and partially withering half-dozen roses for his girl. Nor would he wake up in a bed with a woman in his arms, smelling of perfume and whatever liquor they had downed the previous night. Things were entirely new for Drake this year, which brought out another sigh.

The door slamming shattered his melodramatic thoughts. Soon a pair of lips pressed awkwardly against his, as a body wrapped its arms around him from behind. Drake smiled, knowing exactly who had started this upside-down kiss.

"Happy Valentine's Day Drake! You coming to my apartment?"

"Sure thing JJ," Drake stood while grabbing his jacket and keys. This day, this year may be different, but never had he thought it wouldn't be better.
