1 - Untitled

I'm alone, It's dark, All my senses are on edge. I strain my eyes for a moment, Nothing. So I think nothing. Then there's a sound, a small sound, But a noise nonetheless. I am not alone. I walk faster, not looking back. My mind shows me images that I don't want to see, I get the idea that I'm being followed. The hair stands on the back of my neck, My pace quickens from instinct, I can almost feel that something's breath down my back. Hope comes, I see the lights of my home. I see the gold doorknob shining, offering safety. I reach the porch, I still don't look back, Is it still there? I'm inside, I look out the window but only after I'm sure I'm safe. It's dark, I strain my eyes, What do I see? The neighbor's cat making his way home, But he stopped and stared at me.
