This is a poem I wrote two years ago after I broke up with someone. It's about how painful love can be and how it can also be a blessing.

Love Storm

Love is like a winter breeze

It's cold and bitter and when you sneeze

You're hurt outside and also within

You just can't take it; you just can't win

Love is like a thunder cloud

It strikes you in the face real loud

When it burns you in the face

You begin to wonder, "Where is my place?"

Love is like a giant slide

The world's longest life-long ride

Ups, downs, twists, turns and pain

But unlike love, you go faster in the rain

And yet...

Love is like the shining sun

You think you finally found the one

You cease cowering from the light

And wonder deep in thought, "Is this right?"
