0 - The story

The lights of the meteor shower flashed in the sky and onto the pale green grass of the valley. Humans watched in awe of the bright red, orange, yellow coursing through the night sky. This event only happened every century and every creature came out of their shelters, even I do, and I've seen every meteor shower since the 16th century. All the colors escape me whenever I see a new one. Though, usually they are the same colors.

"Look at all the beautiful colors!" One of the humans yelled.

"They're so bright!" Another called out into the cold air.

I walked up to one, grabbing him by the shoulder. The man turned, looking at me with a weird look on his face.
