

South Pole

By SugaryOblivion

Submitted: March 23, 2008

Updated: March 25, 2008

This a story I wrote for school... -3-;

I liked it and translated it, and I am gonna make more chapters. :3

I hope you like, and sorry for my lame English :D

Provided by Fanart Central.

<http://www.fanart-central.net/stories/user/SugaryOblivion/51833/South-Pole>

| | |
|--------------------------------|----------|
| Chapter 1 - Penguins | 2 |
| Chapter 2 - The monster | 3 |

1 - Penguins

The boat stopped at the ice ground. I got out of it and stood on the cold, strong ice, which seemed very fragile, though it was thick. My adventure could begin!

It wasn't snowing. The weather seemed weirdly warm, even if I was in the middle of South pole. Far away there was a mountain, that was my target. I moored my bot to the ice and went to the mountain. Everything was silent as in a graveyard, I disliked that. I started to run, but got tired fast because the ice got snowy and steep. I went up the mountain and heard babbling. For a second I thought that there were humans, but when I got to the top of the mountain I saw something completely different. There were hundreds of penguins. Big, small, fat, slim and many different. I took my camera and started to take photos of the black birds. I came closer and tried to be as silent as possible. One penguin saw me. I thought that it would think that I'm an enemy, but it ran closer and started running around me like he'd be waiting for me to give something to it. I decided to dare and bravely went closer to the penguins. They didn't ran away. Some ignored me, but some came closer. Penguin babies looked at me like a miracle, because I was a stranger after all. I looked around. This place seemed to marvelous. Suddenly there was a scream. I turned around quickly and saw that far away penguins were running out of the water. From the water dived out a big fish and tried to catch the fish. I was anxious, but luckily the fish stopped and dived back into the water, though it could catch a penguin. I sighed and started to think what to do next. I remembered that I had to find a place where to camp. I went past another mountain, and at the top of it there was an ideal place for a camp. Then I jumped in shock. I forgot all my stuff in the boat! I ran like I was burning back, but when I came back I saw something horrible. The boat was broken into pieces, around the snow was blood, but in the snow lay the first penguin I saw. I hurried at the broken boat, found a white box and ran to the penguin. I sighed in relief when I saw that the black birdie had just mere scratches. Then I looked around. All the ice was in scratches and with blood. I wondered what could attack the penguin, but it looked like a monster. I wondered also about whose blood it was, but it was too depressing to think about it too much. I guided the penguin back to it's pack. Then I understood another thing. I couldn't get back because my boat was broken. I sat in the snow and started to think. That wasn't the best idea, because freezing in the snow and thinking at the same time wasn't very comfortable. I sighed. Suddenly behind the mountain something appeared. It was a huge car. Without thinking I hurried at it and flailed. The car went closer and stopped. From the car got out a few persons. They looked like scientists. I started to explain what I am doing here, and luckily, the persons really were scientists and after a few minutes I got a new and stronger boat. I said goodbye to the scientists and penguins and went into the sea. But I had no idea that something horrible was following me...

2 - The monster

The sun was shining bright, and the air was still warm. I looked around, but saw only the ocean. I was in the middle of nowhere, but I knew where I had to go. I suddenly felt something strange. It seemed that the waves went bigger and bigger. I looked out of the boat, into the water. I saw a shadow swimming nearby. It was huge, at least ten meters long. I hurried to a box with weapons and got out a long spear. I sat on the ground and waited. The ocean started to go berserk. Suddenly, the sky went dark and it started to rain. The waves went bigger and bigger. I took out my raincoat and looked around. I couldn't see the shadow anymore. I thought that the huge thing swam away, but paranoia was still bugging me. Then suddenly something burst out from the water. I grabbed my spear as tight as I could and faced the monster. It was a huge sea dragon. The dragon roared, and then glared at me. Its mouth was bleeding and its teeth were broken. Now I understood which blood was at the island. The monster broke its teeth at the ice. I felt a shiver running through my body. The monster roared again and charged at my boat. It smashed the flagpole and jumped over the boat. I dodged the flying wood pieces and tried to attack the dragon, but it was too fast. The horrifying creature dived in the water, and then got out holding a huge rock in its mouth. I backed away. The dragon threw the rock at me. I dodged it, and fell on the ground. I was surprised at the fact, that the creature was so smart. I took my spear and ran at the monster. I flung it and charged at the monster. SLASH! I wounded the monster. It roared in pain and charged at me. I barely managed to run away, but the monster hit the boat with its tail. Wood pieces fell on me and I felt that my hand is wounded. With my bloody hand I managed to pick up a sword, and dodged another of the monster's attacks. The monster tried to get out the spear, but only pushed it deeper. That made it more angry and aggressive. The monster shrieked and hit the boat with its tail. The boat tilted and I managed in the last second to jump on a box, that was floating in the water. I was very anxious, and I thought that this will be my last minute. The dragon was about to charge, and kill me, but it suddenly stopped. It was just a few inches from me. I could feel how its breath died down. Then the huge creature collapsed in the water. I looked down and saw it sinking and the blood that came from it. I didn't understand why it died, because it didn't lose that much blood to die. I sighed and sat down on the small box. Then I realized something horrible. I was on a box, that could anytime sink, and in the middle of nowhere. I started to worry. Then suddenly I heard a weird noise. I turned around. A huge wave was coming at me! I tried to swim a bit with the box, but the wave fell on me. Everything turned black and I could only feel the freezing water. I opened my eyes. I was sleeping on the same box, but I could see an ice island. It was cold, very cold. I slowly sat up and checked if I am still alive. I was alive, and nothing was missing, only I was wet and freezing. I wondered how I could survive the wave. I took out the sword and used it as a paddle to swim with the box. I slowly moved forward, and the waves helped me a bit. The ice islands went bigger and bigger. After a half hour I was there. I stood on the ice and got the box out of the water. I opened it. From the box fell weapons. I was a bit disappointed, because it didn't have a tent nor food. I took the weapons and put them behind my belt. Then I looked around. This island had woods and I thought that I might find animals to hunt. I walked into the wood, and everything went dark. I felt that something was nearby. I must be lucky, that I always feel some danger besides me.