1 - Invader Kay: The living nightmare

Kay was a normal Irken. She was raised and trained as any other. She dreamed of becoming an Invader like most of her comrades. She studied hard and trained. She was finally able to take her test to become an Irken elite soldier along with all the other worthy Irkens. They were sent on ship to Evastis, the Irken training planet. Kay felt a mix of nervousness and anxiousness. Would she pass? Was the test dangerous? She stared dreamily at the boy sitting next to her. The brash young Zim. He was always so rude yet she still liked him. He often insulted her for staring at him but she ignored him as if he'd said nothing. The ship came to a stop as they landed. Kay held her seat buckle ready to click it open as soon as they came to a halt. She fumbled with her seatbelt as the ship landed rather roughly. She jumped from her seat determined to take her test as soon as possible. She skipped to the front of the ship with butterflies in her stomach. She leapt from the walkway and ran to the test chambers. They were supposed to be trying a new type of test this time. With a group and teamwork they say. After what seemed like hours, the doors opened and a computer spoke

"Irken elites, enter now"

About 50 Irkens with determination on their faces entered. A desert like land awaited beyond the doors. Kay marched in waiting for instructions. The computer spoke again

"escape from the desert land"

The Irkens moved and searched the area for ways out. Not much later Invader Div found a small trap door near some greenery at a far corner. They entered one by one. The next area was an icy hell. A few invaders were illuminated for slipping off the edge of the glaciers. A green light consumed them before they disappeared. Kay planted her feet firmly on the ground and squinted her eyes. She saw it. Beneath the ice there was a metal door. She'd need to use some heat ray to reach it though. She slowly skidded nearer to the place where she'd seen the metal door. Her spider like weapon slid from her life source (the thing Irkens carry on their backs) They blasted a red light from them and the ice was vanquished in the blink of an eye.

"here" she squeaked motioning to the passage she'd created. Then she found it would be as easy as she thought. Ice demons emerged from the sides of the passage and came towards her. She balanced on her spider like limbs and shot the few of them with the laser guns.

"Quickly" she said running down the passage. To her dislike, she bumped her head on the metal. She rubbed her head and pried the door open and let herself and the others in. The computer spoke as they landed again on Evastis.

"defeat the elements"

Suddenly the ground shook. The middle of the ground cracked in two. About 4 Irkens fell into the crevice. Green lights blinded Kay momentarily. Then aliens of all sorts appeared and attacked them. Green lights blinded them again as they battled. I wonder if these are real Kay thought. She slashed a slimy green blob in two. Eventually the aliens were all slain. The Irkens sighed in relief as the computer spoke once again.

"your training is now complete please exit-" the computer abruptly stopped speaking. Then an echo filled the area.

"MALFUNCTION MALFUNCTION REJECTS RELEASED"

Kay cringed and prepared herself. A sight was seen as hundreds of robots landed in front of them in attack mode. They attacked immediately. But this time the green lights weren't flashing. Irkens were being killed for real. Kay gasped as many were slashed in two. Anytime the Irkens attacked the robots they were deflected. The robots had killed everyone. Except Kay. She trembled as the bodies of her comrades landed around her. She twitched. Then the robots seemed to power down. Kay fell to her knees. After a few minutes a wounded Zim emerged from the fog.

"is anyone alive?" He yelled feebly

Then a high pitched cackle filled the area. Kay looked back at Zim. Her eyes were twitching violently.

"we passed Zim you and me" Kay said standing up and facing Zim. She was truly a sight. She looked like she hadn't slept in years and she looked pale. Then before Kay or Zim could take further action they were transported back to Evastis. Zim looked confused at Kay. She was rolling around on the floor laughing like someone had told a joke so funny when you thought of it you laughed. Kay crawled towards Zim and rested her head in her hands. She moved her feet back and forth as if to be daydreaming. She squealed

"now what Zimmy?" she said in baby voice Staring at him.

"were both invaders" Kay smiled a teething smile and twitched a bit more.

then A few Irkens came to their rescue picking Kay up and dragging her off. She laughed some more before being dragged from sight.

From that day on both Kay and Zim were Invaders. Zim had gone on to be part of Incoming doom 1. Kay was busy attempting to regain sanity. Kay escaped the rehabilitation center and went off to capture several planets as fast as the speed of light. The tallest were pleased. She was both tall and good at her job. They were concerned that her thirst for blood was getting out of hand. To be continued...
