1 - Chapter One

I laugh as I stroll through the zoo.

"What kind of witch would be at a muggle zoo?" I ask myself.

I turn towards the reptile house and I freeze when I hear someone speaking in a strange tongue. I squat and touch my hand to the ground so I can read the person's mind. I am stunned by what I see.

I calmly stroll into the reptile house and I see a boy my age standing by a cage speaking in a strange tongue. I walk over to him and notice he is standing in front of a python cage.

"Hi!" I exclaim. He looks at me and says "Hello." back to me.

"I just love animals don't you?" I ask and he simply nods his head.

"Oh, excuse me for not introducing myself, I'm Crystal, Crystal Riddle.", I say, "What is your name?"

"Harry, Harry Potter." He answers back.

"Harry Potter" I whisper.

Saying his name made me shiver. He was the one my father tried to kill those many years ago. How could I not know who he was? His bright green eyes and messy brown hair should have given it away! If not that his lightning bolt scar should have. Maybe the glasses through me off.

I am shaken out of my thoughts by Harry falling into me and I soon see why he lost his balance. A plump boy had pushed Harry out of the way to see the snake. Suddenly the glass in front of him disappeared and he fell in and the snake crawled out.

"thanks" the snake said as it slithered past Harry and me.

The boy's parents rushed over and his mother started pounding on the glass that had reappeared and screaming "Dudly, Dudly!" The man turned and glared at Harry and I decided it was time for me to leave.

I walked into my house and a letter was sitting on my counter. I casually opened it and to my relief it was a letter from Dumbledore. It read:

Dear Crystal,

I have some things to discuss with you before you can attend Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Transportation will be arriving soon.

An old family friend,

Albus Dumbledore.

I set the letter down, grabbed my backpack and walked outside. I walk outside and see Hagrid's bike steadily coming towards me.

Yay I got a chapter done!! Oh and yea this is me w/ a different last name.
second chapter coming soon! (Maby)

P.S. Sorry for the spelling errors.
