Aaron & Julianna

It was darker than Julianna have ever seen as she gazed out her bedroom window into the night sky, her door slowly opened and in walked her maid. "Princess Julianna" the maid said in a quiet voice "are you there darling?" Julianna emerged from behind the thick velvet curtains and looked upon the tiny old cat. "What?" Julianna signed. "The king wishes for an audience with you in the royal chamber." the cat said. "Very well" Julianna signed once more and left the room.

"Daughter" said King Charles the third as he looked down at his delicate daughter Julianna. "Yes father" she said in a little girl tone. "Meet you husband to be" Charles boomed happily as he looked to his left. Julianna looked over to the left casually to see a tall coyote stared upon her with a pleased smirk. "Hello" said the coyote and he stepped forward. Julianna return her gaze to her father, who only gave her a look of pleasure that his oldest girl was finally marrying. "I'm Harold Winderthrup" the coyote said smoothly. "Julianna is my name" she responded with a less pleased tone. "And now" she said I'm going back to my room and she left.

It was just about 10:00 in the morning when Julianna finally awoke, she would have still been sleeping if Flora the maid hadn't woken her with her cleaning. Julianna took a bath and promptly went down to the second floor of the castle to the dining hall just in time for a family breakfast. "Mother Father how are you this grand morning?" Julianna asked quietly as she sat down at the table. "Just peachy darling how are you" her mother Emily asked in her soft sweet voice. "Oh just fine and dandy" Julianna replied. "How did the interdiction go? The one with Harold." Her mother asked "Who?" Julianna was confused. "No wonder you don't remember him! You stormed out of that room so fast last night! What had gotten into you! I was left there with Harold who was as appalled as I was about your behavior!" her father screamed "Now Charles calm your self!" Emily signed. Julianna didn't want to wait to here anymore and so she ran out of the dining hall, out of the castle gates, past the guards, and deep into the woods to her secret hide away in the hollow of a tree.
