1 - Untitled

While my words are devoured by your eyes, imagine a universe controlled by your mind. And just think, how would it feel to see someone else's dreams, or even better... how would it feel to create them. To create another's destiny, to put together every piece of his means. A universe where man conquers the mountains and seas. Where, by your own hands, Death is put to ease. Put life back into that dying deer, which was struck down by the hunter's spear. Let the doe rise once more, to wander the Earth from mountain to shore.

Create a universe where time drips from your fingertips like tears, as slow as seconds turn to years. A universe where the worlds are held by your hands, where man's daily routine is your checkerboard of plans. You can make the rain follow the rainbow, or turn the 'pale horse' into a unicorn. Create a mere angel with the strength of heart to break the devil's horns.

Imagine a bird with wings the size of an ocean, and courage just as deep. A sparrow too beautiful to be caged for one man, or even one world to keep. You'll watch that bird soar, on every world, it breeds its tigers with a roar. A voice so strong it breaks down the mind's door. To roam the sargasso's of imagination, to bring its nations together in one foundation. Your celestial being will scour that universe and discover stars that have never been seen. For a universe is endless, and its time is eternal. The sparrow will fly forever, and forever it will believe.
