Crimson Infinity:
Act One

My name is Emerald Zero, I know how and when people will die, only once have I tried to stop death.

"Crimson! Look t what I made!" I saw myself say to Crimson. My once short, hunter green hair complemented my young, blue eyes.

"Wow, that is awesome Emerald!" His vermillion hair swayed as he turned to see my small sculpture of a kitten. "See mine," he pulled out from in front of himself, a beautifully done sculpture of an adult cat.

"That's beautiful Crimson! It looks so much better than mine." I compared my small kitten to his exelently detailed cat, that's when he took my sculpture and placed it next to his.

"Yours is better than mine any day," he said it with an unsuspected smile. "Look, they're a family!" He motioned at the two sculptures.

I wonder if he was just leading me on, we were so young back then...

Crimson Infinity and I are both elves*. He has long, vermillion coloured hair. He sees things that most people can't. He also knows of my ability to see death. He sees my heart race whenever I am near him. He can see every flaw and yet, all of the beauty.

It was late one night when I first saw it, how and when Crimson would die. At first, I hadn't allowed myself to believe what I had seen. Crimson was lying on my sofa soundlessly that night, which made me wonder if hee too, had seen the preminition.

The second time I saw the vision, was during an all girls ESP class that I was teaching. I still woult not allow myself to believe the vision, such a horrible thing it was.

I saw the vision for the third time as Crimson was approaching me, so I finally gave in to the possibility that the vision was no joke. I could not bear to look at his beautiful face that was half covered by his hair. The earrings in his ear attracted my attention. Now he had four earrings in his left ear. Immages of the vision flittered through my mind.

"No, sorry... Crimson.. I don't..." Tear began to stream down my cheeks.

"Emerald, is somthing wrong?" His voice warried.

"I.. I saw..." I couldn't bear telling him about the vision, so, I ran.

*Elves are human sized on Rieubane averaging about 5'8" in height

These indicate rank... an extra earring means marriage or engagement

Act Two

I ran as fast as I could to that damp, cold, stone building. He almost figured me out, almost got me to talk.

"Crimson,"

"What Emerald?" The wind was blowing that cool autumn day.

"How was it?"

"How was what?"

"you know..."

"Oh, that..."

"Yeah, that."

"It hurt quite a bit..." He said as he felt the three new earrings in his left ear. "Why would you want to know?"

"Because I want earrings when I'm older..."*

"WHAT!?"

I can't believe I said that...

My heart was beating faster than normal, and I was crying. I had locked my door, but I knew just how pathetic the attempt to keep him away was, for he had the key to my door. Now I'm having doubts about giving him the key in the first place.

A few moments later, I heard the door click unlocked. I knew who it was, I did not bother looking. He walked over to me, over to the sobbing lump in the corner of my room.

"I know that something is bothering you Emerald, please tell me what's going on..." His voice was still full of worry.

"I... I had a vision about you..." My voice shook.

"It's okay, you can tell me..."

"No... I can't." I shook my head, still averting my eyes from his face, from his eyes... his eyes are such a beautiful hue of gold, it almost annoys me.

"Fine. Emerald, you know that I have other ways of getting answers from you..."

"I... know..."

I loved him, so I couldn't let him die. I loved him more than the air I breathe, more than the blood in my veins. He is why I stayed alive, so all I needed to do, was to keep him from leaving me forever...

*When a woman gets earrings, it signifies marriage, earrings mean that a divorce occurred or the husband had died and the widow remarried (in that kingdom only)
