1. Why?

Why?

Kohaku Da-Ru

I often wonder why we were put on this earth. What did it achieve? What did God get out of it? Why do we die, instead of live forever? Why do we have to learn of &acirc;&euro;&tilde;great&acirc;&euro;&trade; things that someone did, that just hurt or destroyed our beloved earth even more?

I wonder why I was put on this earth. I&acirc;&euro;&trade;m not like normal people. People think I&acirc;&euro;&trade;m strange because of my interests. People don&acirc;&euro;&trade;t like me because of what I believe in. I wonder why people have to be that way.

I wonder how others can just take life as it hits them. I wonder why humans age so slowly. I wonder why I&acirc;&euro;&trade;m even here. I wonder about a lot of things, but mostly, I wonder about God.

God can give life, but also take it away. Why take back what you willingly give? Why destroy what you have created? Why damage a building, and break a heart? Why kill and then replace by bringing another life into this world, which will also be taken, in time?

Nobody knows&acirc;&euro;&brvbar;only God.

Even though I&acirc;&euro;&trade;ve lived in this world for fourteen years, I still don&acirc;&euro;&trade;t understand it.

Why is a very big question even if it seems so little. It opens up many doors, many windows&acirc;&euro;&brvbar;many thoughts, many wonders. Why is such a powerful word. It may not seem it, but it is.

SO now I wonder, when will my life end? Will I still wonder as much as I do now? Why will I wonder? Why DO I wonder? Only God knows. God knows everything.

Even why.
