

Perfection through silence

By d_girl

Submitted: May 23, 2004

Updated: May 23, 2004

another poem but it's not finished though.

1. Perfection through silence

Perfection through silence

the screaming inside is drowned by the silence drowned by all the defiance ears hurting from all the crys stabbed all the lies just sitting back watching people let time pass the by then they die and millions more cry tired of hearing it in your dreams it would be perfect if it was jus silence then maybe moods wouldn't be full of violence and there wouldn't be hurtful words that are so often mispoken and heard