

A poem about love and death

By Ceceoluv

Submitted: August 5, 2006

Updated: August 5, 2006

A poem I wrote when I was bored

1. Death and Love

Your Trail of Broken Hearts Will Eventually Lead You to a Life Of Pain and Death forget to take the wine and fill it
Tip the glass of what little sanity will spill it.
My blood stains the sheets a lonely blue. These tears are shed and not for you.
Complete my puzzle I'll swing with my arrows of gold. I'll light a match and you'll be left out in the cold.
Sister sweetie's got your back. Open your door and never give you slack
On the string of your life you cut with your words
Don't worry about me it's just the thought that hurts.
Dripping blue of long forgotten thread
Leave me alone, we'll soon be dead
Close my eyes and lay me down to rest
Bleeding is my broken heart hidden in my chest
A lovely evening followed by an eternal sleep
Don't cry when I'm gone, in life I was the one to weep.
Silver sheets and golden bright
Sing to me and kiss goodnight
Alive you live to love and die
I'll wake you up some other time
In my death I lay forgotten
And in my life I'm cold and rotten
Love me more or let me sit and wait for death do us part
Or take your frozen words of knives and drive it through my heart