6. Sasuke's Eggs!

Walking passed a store silently, Sasuke noticed that a man was selling egg decorating kits. "Boy, would you like one of these?" The elderly man asked. "Ah....What do you do?" Sasuke asked in reply. "It's a family project. You take an egg," He said, taking an egg from a small plastic container, and plopping it into a cup filled with green water,"And you wait for a while. And when you take it out, you have a colored egg." He quickly showed the young boy one of the eggs he had done earlier, which was dried, so he pulled out a marker and drew intricate designs on it. Sasuke silently imagined him and his family doing this together at home. "I'll take one!" He blurted out, reaching to dig in his pocket. The man laughed and shook his head telling him it was on the house. Sasuke thanked him, and hurried home, finding his family gathered around their kitchen table. "What's going on, Sasuke?" His mother asked with a smile. She then saw the small box in his hand, and nodded while giggling. Itachi and their fathers expressions were both confused as Sasuke went to the fridge, and their mother went to the cubord. They grabbed the needed supplies and sat again, setting up. "What's this?" Their father asked as he watched the two pour in the die for the eggs. "We're going to color eggs, Father!" Sasuke said happily. Soon enough, the four of them were chuckling and laughing as the cups were passed around, sometimes spilling.
