1. Once Upon A Time

Dark, they say.
As black as night,
Is my heart, my soul.
They tell me
I was born from darkness,
That I shall die in darkness,
That I am darkness.
Of course they say this,
For they do not know
My past, my history, my story.
They only know the now,
The soul that has been burned,
The heart that has been enveloped
In pain, and in hate.
What they do not know
Is my beginning,
The light from which
I once drew existence.
A light that is cast still,
Though blocked now by
The very things
Which sustain me today.
Now that light,
So weak and fragile,
Is blocked, still,
Blanketing me in the shadow,
The shadow of fears,
Of worries, of revenge.
But the point remains,
There was a light,
Once upon a time...
And now they know,
I am not darkness.
I am a shadow.
