1. The Beginning

It was a wet and rainy day, Johnny sighed as he looked up at the window, rain running down the ceiling.

He then sighed happily, imagining his love, Haley, waiting for him to return to her later that day, again, he sighed.

Johnny's feelings had grown complex, the days upon days of being away from his love had torn his heart, he hadn't seen her soft smile for some two weeks. Johnny got up from the table, decorated with forks and spoons, and knives, He mopped around the house, wandering for things to do. A shining soda can sat still and half full on the table, he thought of what he should do with the can. He picked it up and took a small drink, setting it back down he moved along into his kitchen, scavaging the cabinets for food until he had run upon some cookies given to him by Haley. Johnny had the cookies wrapped up in some old paper towels and took them off, unraveling the cookies. Taking one out, he held it up to his mouth, then opening it and taking a small bite off of it, it had the scent of love baked into it. Johnny then fell into a small state of depression, yearning for his love, but as he took another bite, he knew she still loved and thought of him, he could only imagine wrapping his arms around her, or kissing her soft warm lips. Letting out a smile he sighed again, not a sigh of depression, but one of love, he knew later that day, his love would kiss him again.
