Chapter 5 - Another Point of View	4

1 - Untitled

As Thaddeus walked home in the rain after a long night of drinking and partying, he obtained an anonymous call, all it said was: Run.

He instantly went from perky and drunk to freaked out... he went into the first building he saw and sat down on a dusty orange couch. as he contemplated on his previous call, he saw a shadow move from the outside window. Now he was burning up inside. That feeling where you observe all your surroundings, waiting for another movement to confirm what you just saw, and you want to get up and run, but you know that right when you move... it will get you. So Thaddeus sat there, didnt move a muscle(which he was known to have many of.) thinking.

After about 10 minutes, that feeling had simmered down to Thaddeus and he decided that his apartment was only a couple blocks away from where he was... so he ran..

But right as he got up from the couch, time to his eyes became slow motion, and for a split second OF a split second he saw what was had been in pursuit of him.

Then in a second more, he woke up in his bed.

4 - Lost memory... or not

Thaddeus Varsik had actually gotten home safe from the party and he went straight to bed. That's what his wife Sarah had told him when he awoke as she went to get him some ibuprofen. He tried to go back to sleep without throwing up.

He awoke feeling more rested around 4:00 p.m. Whilst he still thought that his dream was true, but decided to go with what Sarah had said for he was drunk and had no memory of the night before... Thaddeus lay there in his bed pounding his head trying to get his real memory back.

He decided to give his old friend a call who is specialized in scientific memory retrieval, named Lucas Esposito.

He reached into his alcohol stained pants for his cell phone but it wasn't to be found. As the phones in his apartment had not been hooked-up yet. Thaddeus walked a few blocks to find a payphone, yet he saw something on the ground. He picked up a cell phone that turned out to be his but was broken. He shouted obscene words at his expensive cell phone as he walked to the payphone about 10 feet away. He waited as he heard the ringing and looked into the old shop that had been closed down for a few years time. He saw through the almost opaque window a room close to empty with only an orange couch...

The phone dropped.

5 - Another Point of View

Lucas AKA Luke had obtained a "prank call" supposedly from his friend Thaddeus, he knew because he bought a new caller ID for his rich self. Luke had also somehow known about Thaddeus's phone problems and sent him an email:

Thaddeus,

I have obtained a call from you and I haven't liked any of your jokes anyway, I heard on the call a scream of your's just as we were disconnected. I am flying over there and we will soon meet.

well any way, who the hell is Luke?

Luke likes to go by the human species, he is pretty close to it yet still VERY far away. cliche Ok Lucas Esposito was born on our moon and therefore he is close to earth but not enough, and his abilities and strengthes are truly akward. He is pretty strong but is easily KO'd with the right martial art type move. As for his speed, he usually runs like normal so in pe class the kids don't get freaked out, but still, one time I dropped string cheese and Luke sprinted so fast that i couldnt see him and WHAM!!! I was tackled and the cheese was gone. It seems that his nickname of "the walking encyclopedia" and "demon racer" are well henced in this case... It's not perfect though, Luke cannot touch metals. he has a mercury system running through his body and metals... all metals will either give him allergic reactions or KILL him all together.

Luke met with Thaddeus and he told Luke everything. Luke came to a conclusion and discussed where this machine Luke had developed in unlocking a person's deepest memories and that would create a more defined version of that persons brain.

They then met in Luke's home town in Pennsylvania and put the memory definer to the test.
