Chapter 1- The Accident

Ow! Stupid ice! cried Yuki, as he fell onto the snow, and ice covered cement. It was a thick, cold, blizzard, and there was black ice EVERYWHERE. Yuki and Kyo were walking home together, since Tohru went to work right after school. As Yuki tried to stand up, he winced with pain and fell again. What s wrong with you? asked Kyo sarcastically.

I-I can t get up, I think I sprained my ankle, said Yuki as he struggled to stand, but again failed. Kyo sighed and slung Yuki s arm around his neck helping him to his feet. I don t know why I should help you, but either way, you owe me one, he said calmly.

Yeah, thanks, said Yuki, somewhat surprised.

Whatever just don t tell anyone I helped you, Kuso Nezumi, said Kyo in his usual annoyed tone.

Uh could you also pick up Tohru from work? I don t wanna make her walk alone in this blizzard, Yuki added.

Fine, Kyo growled, getting even more annoyed than usual. Truthfully, he didn t mind picking up Tohru, infact, he wanted to, but he wouldn t let Yuki know that. Although they weren t enemies any more, they still argued, like cousins do. They also, still used the zodiac nicknames (Kuso Nezumi, Baka Neko) that they d grown accustomed to; it was like a habit.

Kyo walked back out into the blizzard, to go pick up Tohru. He walked through the snow that was thick as glass. He could barely see the sidewalk ahead of him. The only reason he could see the sidewalk at all, was because of the streetlights. The roads and cars were nearly invisible, but Kyo could sense, and hear the cars so that didn t bother him. (A/N: He still has cat instincts, hearing, and reflexes)

When he reached the building that Tohru worked in, he went inside to wait for her. About two minutes later she emerged from the staircase. Her face lit up as she saw Kyo.

Kyo-kun, you came to pick me up? How sweet! said an ecstatic Tohru, like always, Kyo couldn t help but smile, and slightly blush.

Yeah, just get your coat on and lets go, before this blizzard really picks up, said Kyo, trying to hide the redness that had planted itself on his face and was spreading fast.

Okay, Tohru nodded as she did up her coat. But where s Yuki-kun? she asked before putting on her hat and mitts.

He hurt his ankle, Kyo answered simply.

Is he going to be alright!? asked Tohru, worry clear in her voice and eyes.

Yeah, he ll be fine, I just came instead of him cause it s dangerous to walk alone in a storm like this, Kyo explained, his blush slightly fading, but still noticeable.

Thank you so much! cried Tohru, her worry replaced with gratitude. Okay, I m ready, so let s go! she said cheerfully, as usual.

Kyo smiled again, and the two headed out the door, both smiling. The snow was still thicker than ever. They were able to see the sidewalk easily. The problem occurred when they crossed the street. Kyo sensed something coming, coming fast. A minivan was spinning out of control, on a giant patch of ice and headed straight for Tohru. All he could think was No, I m not gonna let it happen again. Just then, Tohru she saw the blinding headlights as she was pushed out of the way by someone.

The next sound she heard was one that she d never forget, a sickening crunch of metal against flesh, and a familiar pain filled, blood-curdled scream, and a thud as a body hit the streetlight and finally the ground.

Tohru sat there, wide eyed and horrified as she saw the orange haired boy sprawled out under the streetlight in a small puddle of crimson blood, limbs bent in odd angles. She broke out of her trance, and ran over to Kyo. If the Sohmas were still cursed, he would ve turned into a cat just then. KYO!! KYO!! cried Tohru desperate for a response.

A fairly heavy woman climbed out of the van holding a cell phone. Oh my gosh!! Are you two all right!? I lost control and-

I m fine but call an ambulance for Kyo!! cried a devastated Tohru, cutting off the older woman. She nodded, flipped open her cell phone, and dialed the number.

K-Kyo, I-I m s-s-s-so s-s-sorry, just p-please, please be okay, whispered Tohru tears streaming down her rosy cheeks as she felt his wrist for a pulse. When she found none, she checked his neck and found a faint beat. OH THANK GOD!! she cried sobbing. She held his body close to hers for warmth, as she whispered I m sorry between her sorrowful sobs. She felt so helpless, since she couldn t help him, in any other way. She began to feel dizzy and lightheaded as her vision began to blur. Then she heard sirens in the distance before the world went black&
