Chapter 5 - Resisting Space Prison	6

1 - Prologue

I sat quietly on a branch as Jake and Blake ran around below. I could see the horizon from where I was, so I watched that instead of Jake and Blake. The horizon looked different than it normally did though. It had some sort of dark aura surrounding it. Usually it has a normal, orange aura. That could only mean one thing, the cops. Since this is the future most people are living in space, but we decided to stay at Earth. The cops are always trying to catch us and take us to space, but we resisted. That's how we got the name The Runners. " Blake, Jake, it's the police!" I yelled. They quickly ran to the remains of our old town, to hide in the rubble that our friends and family didn't take. There was a wet couch that I was forced to jump into, but the police had already seen me. That gave us only one other option, run! We ran through the rubble and up the stairs of an old building. We got to the top and jumped down onto another building. We kept scaling buildings till we got to the final building. We slid down the building, which was actually soft from the moss on the outside. When at the bottom, we climbed into a trapdoor and hid behind a crumbled wall. After the act we had pulled, the police will throw us in juvenile jail in space. We couldn't go to space, we just couldn't. I knew the police would find us somehow, but I had a plan. "Jake, Blake, camouflage with the wall! That's our only chance of staying on Earth!" I whispered to the others. After a few minutes, the police came down the trapdoor and started searching frantically for us. They beamed their flashlights everywhere, except for on us. After about an hour so of searching, they gave up and left the little cave. We were safe, for now that is. We'll have to check outside later to make sure they aren't still waiting for us to come out of our little hiding spot.

2 - Starry Night

I sat on the box I had rested over the trapdoor earlier to gaze upon the stars. I had always wondered what made them shine so brightly up in the night sky. This was certainly a starry night, just for us. I bet that our civilization on the moon has a better view than we do back at Earth. I rocked back and forth, waiting for Jake and Blake to return. I then pulled a piece of chalk out of my pocket. "How did that get there?" I wondered as I started drawing on the hard surface of the Earth. "Charlie, what are you drawing?" Blake asked me as he stood next to me.

"Where's Jake?" I questioned Blake.

"He's right behind me." Blake told me.

But that's when Blake looked behind him. Jake wasn't there.

"But we both walked back through the forest together! I didn't ditch him or anything!" Blake nervously told me.

If you ever saw Blake, he never gets nervous about ANYTHING.

We then darted towards the forest, arming ourselves with anything we may need to save Jake. We darted through the forest with no resistance. We stopped when we saw a police car dead ahead. Inside was Jake, crying for help. How would we save him? There was police surrounding the vehicle, so Jake could not escape. I knew the police's plan. They kidnapped Jake from Blake so they could take Jake to the Moon where we would never see him again.

I rushed toward the vehicle with Blake, to save Jake. One problem happened though. The police trapped us and threw us in the car with Jake. We all knew we were in trouble then. We wouldn't get arrested though, but we would get trapped on the Moon FOREVER. The word forever is a very strong word to me, as I think of it as trapped, never able to leave. We knew we would have to break out of the Moon home everyone lived in, but how....how would we get out with police surrounding us at every corner, in every cranny.

3 - Escape from the Moon

We got dropped off in the air shaft inside the moon. Now, this isn't a very good place for them to throw us into, because if the air starts up again, we could get chopped up into itsy, bitsy pieces. Our only means of escape was the small vent that none of us could fit through in a wall surrounding us.

I thumped on the metal and it was hollow. Seconds later, I threw myself into the metal wall that seems to be hollow. "Holy crap!" I yelled as we fell out the hole I made with my now sore arm. We fell down a hole that was in between the 2 walls leading to 2 different rooms. We hit the bottom in a matter of seconds.

From there, I could see space, which was very odd since the moon is not see through. we then ran down the hall but stopped when we saw two police officers.

I ran up to one and kicked him in the head with my foot and the other one with my hand. We ran through the doors and into the emergency escape route to Earth. We landed on home Earth not long before we left the Moon. We were home free...for now that is.

4 - The End is Near

The end....it's near. The police know all of our hiding spots, even the disguised ones. We're trapped, a dome's being sealed around us, to keep us from leaving until the police arrive. the dome sealed over our town, we could not escape, unless we went underground.

That wasn't a bad idea! We could build a tunnel under the city! But it would take forever... possibly over a month. There had to be a faster way, but what would we use? The Drill! We could make a tunnel with a drill! It was a brilliant idea, possibly my best idea ever in my whole life.

I crept over to the drill, and started the engine. Moved the drill forward, toward my destination. Once at my destination, I started to move down, shredding all the cement and soil that came in my way.

"Blake, Jake, cover up our trace, we can't be known for escaping." I yelled behind me over the driller's loud engine. We were almost halfway to freedom from the dome.

Right ahead of us we saw mini drills drilling the same way we were. Who were those things, and why were they heading for the end of the dome as well? Inside the mini drills I saw 2 faces. One of them was my cousin, Shade. And his father, Onyx.

Within a few minutes, we reached the outside of the dome. We were home free, for now. Once the police find us, we may be trapped forever. Trapped forever...that's my least favorite sentence. Yet that may be what will happen to us.

5 - Resisting Space Prison

With chills shivering down my spine, I climbed out of the drill into the open air. I was fearing that the police would find us and that we would never be able to return to Earth.

Then I heard sirens nearby. I knew that they would eventually catch us. I guess it's now time to say goodbye to Earth, our home. Our true home, which was in space, is where we would be taken to. I believe though that our true home is Earth, and I will let nothing tear our connection apart. I am not leaving Earth, my true home. If they even try to take me away, I'll rip them apart. This time, it's my choice to make a change.

Just then, the police showed up to rain our parade. One by one, they threw us onto their ship. The ship slowly rose, and zoomed off. I then sunk my teeth into 1 of the polices' shoulders. The other police man got the same treatment. Suddenly, the ship crashed into the soil. I limped out alive with the other two. Luckily, the police men died in the crash, but it won't be long before they find out they're missing.

I looked above. Apparently, there was now many ships zooming towards us. And don't forget their vehicles with explosives behind them. This time they were really going to kill us. I picked up a knife on the ground for defense. This would be the hardest battle of our lives.
