Chapter 1 - Half-decent

2

1 - Half-decent

You have to admit; he's a half-decent guy,
It's a half-decent sort of crush,
I bet you won't give him half of a chance,
Cause you're not half-decent enough.
One look at him and then you couldn't care less,
His half-decent kindness will not pull you in,
If you think his body's not half-decent enough,
Then to love him's an un-decent sin.

We were half-decent friends, then half decent lovers,
Then you made it end, find half-decent others,
It was good while it lasted; a half-decent year,
Your half-decent dress means you're over your fears.

Will you not admit; I'm a half decent girl,
It's a half-decent kind of dream,
I won't let it go the direction we did,
Is it half-decent, am I too keen?
One look at him and he's half-decent enough,
His half-decent kindness is pulling me in,
I don't care if his body is decent or not,
I could love him, is that such a sin?

We were half-decent friends, then half decent lovers,
Then you made it end, find half-decent others,
It was good while it lasted; a half-decent time,
My half-decent song means I don't want you mine.

We're half-decent friends, try half decent lovers,
It ended, I'm finding a half-decent other,
It was good while it lasted; with a half-decent kiss,
But he's the guy I'd be un-decent to miss.
