The Sculptor

Goodness is all that makes your unfathomable shape
Oh, how we've lost something great
Doing what we did back then

You've given a gift of great cost, however
Anyone of us is liable to receive it
When we only need to stop being so selfish
Everyone of us is lost to the other end
Hope of escape you've provided

Just another hoax they say
Ever crying as we indulge in our feelings
Helping ourselves to what we don't deserve
Only you'd have the strength to put up with it all
Verifying that love is essential to your makeup
All I can say right now,
How I don't know where I'd be without you

Try figure, all to one point
Encompassing multiple bodies, yet how?
To no end you are, yet no beginning either
Reaching across infinitely vast plains of space
Awe inspiring to me, yet why left alone to them?
Got to wonder where everything went astray there
Rendering ourselves doomed to death by unintentional suicide
And to think we could do this all our own?
Make a man who walked the earth, and turn him into this?
Meak he seemed, but not by our hands
All his marks were part of his plan
Today we shan't forget that betrayal
On this carving hung the weight of the world
Now why can't you rejoice at that?
