1 - Chapter 1; Sunny's discovery

The sun setting seemed almost unreal... Too good to be true. I, we, were almost out of here.. This horrid house with this horrid stench and all of it's eyes slowly watching us. Making sure we don't put a toe out of line.

Just as the setting sun, the rising sun seemed almost unreal too. We were out. More importantly....those damned eyes weren't watching us anymore. They were gone.....and so were we.

Me? Oh you haven't figured it out yet have you? I'm Sunny..the youngest of the three. And I'm just about to make the most disturbing discovery of all - danger among us. Ever since our parents died. We Baudelaire's have been shipped across country. Every where imaginable. But, nothing compared to this. Count Olaf's house. With those creepy eyes....always watching. We had been there more than once. This was our second time. it was surprising actually. I didn't think they'd ever let us back there...But, it didn't matter because we weren't there any more.....

I climbed atop Violet's lap trying to get a good glimpse of the fading house. Good..I thought as I could no longer see it. Ever since we had been there Klaus and Violet had been acting strangely... maybe now that we were gone things would get better.. oh boy..am I ever wrong.

I laid my eyes upon a tiny folded piece of paper lying dormant or undisturbed on the floor or the car. Which ever you prefer.. I crawled out of Violet's lap. I picked up the tiny piece of paper recognizing Count Olaf's scrawly handwriting. I was shocked to see what it said : Dear ( there was an ink smudge on the name) Remember..when you get to your next destination send me a letter telling me your whereabouts. If you do not..I will not share in your fortune with you when I get hold of it.

So, there was danger among us.. It was either Violet or Klaus.. It wasn't me.. I was too young to carry out orders. If it was one of them....

Which One was it?
