A poem I wrote, feeling particularly morbid at the time.

Chapter 1 - Deadly Questions

1 - Deadly Questions

So death
Is just life
unlived?
Unbreathing
Unknowing
Unthinking
Unfeeling

So, how is it so different from life?

The numbness of a ritual slowly fading into a concept of conformity

How do you escape the cycle?

Break free of the bounds and chains that bind you to the ground and clip your wings, forcing you to stay forever.

Death is a release? An escape?

But no... death is the quick way out. A fast solution to a problem that has troubled people for centuries.

So it's all worth it in the end?

And suffering, pain and agony of life, the torture of your soul and childhood fading?
