1 - intro: into the abyss my life is as a mountain it gets harder as I go, and time is of the essence a river that must flow, flowing until it reaches the point, when it must fall, my life is as a mountain, and time is like a wall.

I awoke, my eyes filled with tears, every day it became harder to understand, with every breathe it became harder to contemplate the meaning of this useless journey through time and hurt. I was late...again, the school had grown tired from my absence, I was never able to make it to my first period class, or maybe, subconsciously, I just didn't want to . After all HE was there. I loved him with all my heart, at least I thought I did, but that was before, before my life swirled into a more quizzical and emotional trip into the dark abyss that is my mind, a great dark hole, where nothing is real, and what was real or what used to be real was twisted until it no longer held the same meaning, until it was something else entirely. Time no longer existed, and dreams were reality.
