1 - Untitled

the sky was turning red and the waves were going up and down like granpa's last breaths. i found myself at my favourite pace and i smile at the welcoming sounds of the ocean. i could see the trees dancing wildly in the wind. Then suddenly the sun was nowhere to be found and the moon was floating almost lasily in the sky. One by one the people left the beach, leaving me alone with only the moon to keep me company. The silver bracelet shone brightly in the early evening sky. I walked past singing flowers reaching their fingers towards the violet clouds. It felt good to get my shoes off and sink my feet into the gold dust. I closed my eyes and let my hair dance. The crickets were singing their mellow dramatic song of sorrow and depression. the waves reach their hands out and dampen my feet. I watched the purple sky turn navy. The air smelt salty and filled with the sound of a Morpork. i smiled and spent the night sleeping on the sof sand, allowing the sea to take me into her arms, and then i drowned.
