I often find it difficult to come up with something to do with friends on the weekend that isn't just sitting in a cafe or watching TV series. Recently, a friend suggested trying escape rooms. I went to the website

<https://boxroom.com/> and chose a dark and mysterious room for a group of five people. It was incredible! Everyone was active, solving puzzles together, giving each other hints, and laughing. The weekend flew by quickly and happily, and we were left with a rush of positive emotions and a sense of real team success. This kind of activity is definitely more memorable than ordinary entertainment at home.
