Prequel:

Thunder boomed and lightning flashed as Tai hid under his bed sheets. It was late at night when the storm had started and like most six-year-old boys, Tai hated thunderstorms. He hid under the covers and covered his ears while he wished the storm would stop.

Then suddenly, it went silent. Tai poked his head out from under the covers and looked around his dark bedroom. He crawled down to the bottom of his bed and opened the curtain slightly to see id the storm had stopped. BOOM! Out of nowhere came one of the loudest thunder booms Tai had ever heard.

“Ahhh...” he screamed as he fell backwards onto his bed. He quickly got up, ran out of his room, down the hall and into his parents bedroom. He ran across the wooden floor in his bare feet and jumped onto his parent’s bed.

“What the?” his mother said, awaking suddenly.

“Mommy, I’m scared,” Tai said in his innocent voice.

“Okay, Tai. It’s just a storm,” she said. “Comon, you can sleep in the middle of your dad and I.”

“Huh? What’s going on?” Tai’s dad asked, half asleep.

“Never mind honey,” she said. “Go back to sleep.”

“Okay...” he said and fell asleep.

“Goodnight Tai,” she whispered in Tai’s ear, but Tai was already asleep.

2 - Chapter 1

Ok, this is the actual story now. hope u like it!

10 years later...

Out in the middle of a grassy field laid a 16-year-old boy, Tai. He was lying down; watching the clouds roll by and feeling the wind blow in his long, black hair. On the right side of his mouth, sticking out was a piece of grass. He had his hands behind his head and he was slightly chewing on the piece of grass.

“Tai?” someone yelled. “Tai, where are you?”

“Huh?” Tai said and sat up quickly. He looked behind him and saw his little sister, Melanie, running through the field, towards him. “Mel? What are you doing here?”

“Mommy’s going out and you’ve gotta watch me!” Melanie said.

“Aww mom!” Tai said quietly to himself and he flopped back down on his back in the grass.

“What’s wrong, Tai?” Melanie said. “Don’tcha wanna watch me while mom goes out?”

“Of course I do, Mel, but—” Tai said, “she always dumps you with me without even asking me if I’m doing anything!”

“Oh,” Melanie said.

Tai sat back up and faced Melanie. “But it’s okay,” Tai said, trying to keep Melanie from becoming sad. “Come here and lie down with me.”

Melanie ran over to Tai and sat down next to him. “So, what were you doing over here?” she asked.

“Thinking,” Tai replied.

“About what?” Melanie asked.

“Stuff,” Tai replied.

“What stuff?” Melanie asked.

“Never mind,” Tai said. “This is just where I come to think or to get away from everything.”

Melanie layed down and looked at the clouds. “Hey,” she said, pointing to a cloud to her right, “that cloud looks like mom scolding you.” She laughed.

“Hey!” Tai stated, “wait,” he laughed, “it does!”

They both laughed.

“Wait a minute,” Tai said, “Where’d you learn such a big word?”

“What big word?” Melanie asked.

“Scolding,” Tai stated. “That’s a pretty big word for a five year old, you know.”

“Mommy told me,” Melanie said. “She said that she scolds you way too much and she’s getting tired of it!”

“Good!” Tai said. “I’m getting tired of her always yelling at me anyways!”

Melanie laughed quietly.

“Let’s see,” Tai said, looking back at the clouds, “hmm! hey! That one looks like a wolf.”

â€œCool!â€? Melanie said. â€œI love wolves!â€?

â€œI know, I know!â€? Tai stated.

â€œHey Tai,â€? Melanie said.

â€œYeah?â€? Tai asked.

â€œDo you think I could ever own my own wolf?â€? Melanie asked, still watching the cloud that looked like a wolf.

â€œMaybe,â€? Tai said.

He sat up and shook the grass out of his hair. â€œCâ€™mon, Iâ€™ll race you back to the house,â€? he said, standing up.

â€œOkay!â€? Melanie said quickly. She quickly turned over and got up really fast and ran.

â€œHey! No fair!â€? Tai said. â€œYou cheated.â€?

â€œCanâ€™t catch me!â€? Melanie taunted.

â€œOh yeah?â€? Tai yelled and ran after her.
